Tammy Mulligan is the Executive Director of Denver Urban Matters (DenUM). A native of Colorado, Tammy has more than twenty years of leadership experience in human services both in Denver and Baltimore. During her time at DenUM, Tammy has conducted program evaluation, narrowed the focus and delivery of services, increased inclusivity efforts and developed a leadership team. She has increased revenue by 120% including individual donor development, foundation funding and major program development.

Tammy is passionate about the eradication of poverty and has spent significant volunteer time on this issue. She has served on the Weatherization Policy Advisory Committee for the Governor's Office of Energy Management and Conservation, the Board of the Colorado Anti-Hunger Network with two years as Chair, Colorado Interfaith Voices for Justice, Colorado Impact, the Board of the Western Arapahoe County Homeless Alliance, and the Advisory Committee for the Colorado Participation Project.

She is committed to developing the nonprofit sector. Tammy served on the board of Community Shares of Colorado, and served as chair for two years. Community Shares is a community giving fund dedicated to democratizing philanthropy. She served on the Principles and Practices Advisory Council for the 2011 and 2008 editions, a document committed to building nonprofit capacity and increasing accountability and transparency. She also served on a committee to help the Colorado Council of Churches redesign their infrastructure. In addition, Tammy has mentored numerous young people through Urban Servant Corps as they explore nonprofits as a career choice.

A graduate of Metropolitan State College in 2000, with a BA in Journalism, she also attended the University of Colorado. Tammy completed a Masters of Science in Organizational Leadership at Regis University in 2012. She completed a Lean Management Certification through the City and County of Denver in 2013.

Tammy started her career in human services as a volunteer at Samaritan House in Denver, CO and soon became a floor supervisor. After that she worked in Baltimore, MD for six years at St. Ambrose Outreach Center, starting as a full-time volunteer and becoming the Assistant Director. At the time, she concentrated on youth programs including mentoring, after-school tutoring, summer camps and community literacy. At Inter-Faith Community Services in Englewood, CO she was the Program Director focusing on homeless prevention and transitional housing. She joined Denver Urban Ministries as the Executive Director in 2002. DenUM is an advocate, educator and trusted provider of basic human and employment services to vulnerable people in greater Denver.
