Dear Nominations Committee of the Denver Women's Commission,

I am delighted to learn about the opportunity to apply for the role of a Commissioner of the Denver Women's Commission. I have been fortunate to have attended your meetings since December of 2017, and I look forward to engaging with the work the Commission does in a more formal capacity. I am a public administrator, currently pursuing a PhD and working with graduate students at the University of Colorado Denver. I have not always been surrounded by an abundance of resources and tools that I can share with the greater community. So, now that I am, I believe it to be my civic duty to contribute those resources in any way I can to underserved and marginalized communities.

In my family, I am one of four and the youngest of my siblings. Despite our full house, I am the first one to attend a four-year university. I am the only person in my family with a college degree and the only with a Master's degree. I have experienced first-hand how public policy fails communities like the one I grew up in. Though I have a lot to be proud of as an individual, I am more profoundly driven by the fact that the community that immediately surrounded me has not been given the same opportunities I have received. I have been an exception to the rule, not an intended consequence. This focus is primarily why I hope to continue contributing to the Denver Women's Commission mission of empowering our city's women and girls. I recognize that in our society, women are still marginalized through many avenues such as pay inequity, housing inequity, sexual assault, and domestic violence. I hope to contribute to efforts that help undo some of these legislated inequities, as well as help women and girls that have fallen victim to personal abuse.

I hope to help make a lasting positive impact in the Denver community. I recognize that women are the backbone of society and the bedrock of this country. Women have historically been at the forefront of social and civil rights movements and have been catalysts for transformation. As a Commissioner, I hope to honor that history and reality, and make my own contributions through advocacy and empowerment. I have a deeply rooted and personal commitment to empowering women particularly because I grew up in a culture of aggressive and belittling masculinity. As a feminist, my approach is to target gender-dominated supremacy, and work to eliminate it in sociopolitical contexts. This is an ambitious feat that will take generations to see through, but I hope to make my mark toward those ends.

I recognize and applaud that the Women's Commission is holding space for as many underrepresented women (and men) to join the Commission this year. I respect this commitment to diversity, and expect better outcomes with more diverse perspectives in terms of ideology, class, and education attainment. I do, however, hope to prove that I have a lot to contribute by virtue of being the only higher education administrator in the commission as well as the only AfroLatina. As a Commissioner, I hope to help recruit more women that are Muslim, trans, Native American, and differently abled so that we may expand our scope of impact. To this end, I hope to become a part of the Community Engagement and Nominations committees to help them meet their missions and ultimately, to help make recommendations to the Mayor that truly make a difference for Denver's women and girls.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I welcome the opportunity to discuss my potential to assist the ongoing efforts of the Denver Women's Commission.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Puello
