

Denver Public Art Program History

- Denver's 1% for Public Art Program was established in 1988 through executive order 92 by Mayor Federico Peña.
- Ordinance 650 was passed by Denver City Council under Mayor Wellington E. Webb in 1991 to revise Denver Municipal Code (DRMC 20-85).
- It directs that one percent of any capital improvement project undertaken by the city with a design and construction budget of at least $1 million be set aside for public art.

Denver Public Art – At a Glance

- Program History – 30+ Years
 - Collection Website: www.denverpublicart.org
- 1% Public Art Projects
 - 70+ ACTIVE Projects
 - Budgets totaling more than $18 million
- Maintenance
 - Collection Value - $45 million and growing
 - More than 440 artworks in City & County
- Urban Arts Fund Mural Program
- Special Projects, Programs, Tours

How does a project qualify?

- If a capital improvement project (CIP) has an estimated cost of design and construction totaling $1 million or more
- AND - the CIP provides “finished space for human occupancy” and will be “available for public view,”
- THEN - 1% of the construction budget is set aside for public art

Public Art Selection Panel

Six representatives total from the following three categories:

- Community Representatives (min. 3)
- Artist(s)
- Arts Professional(s)

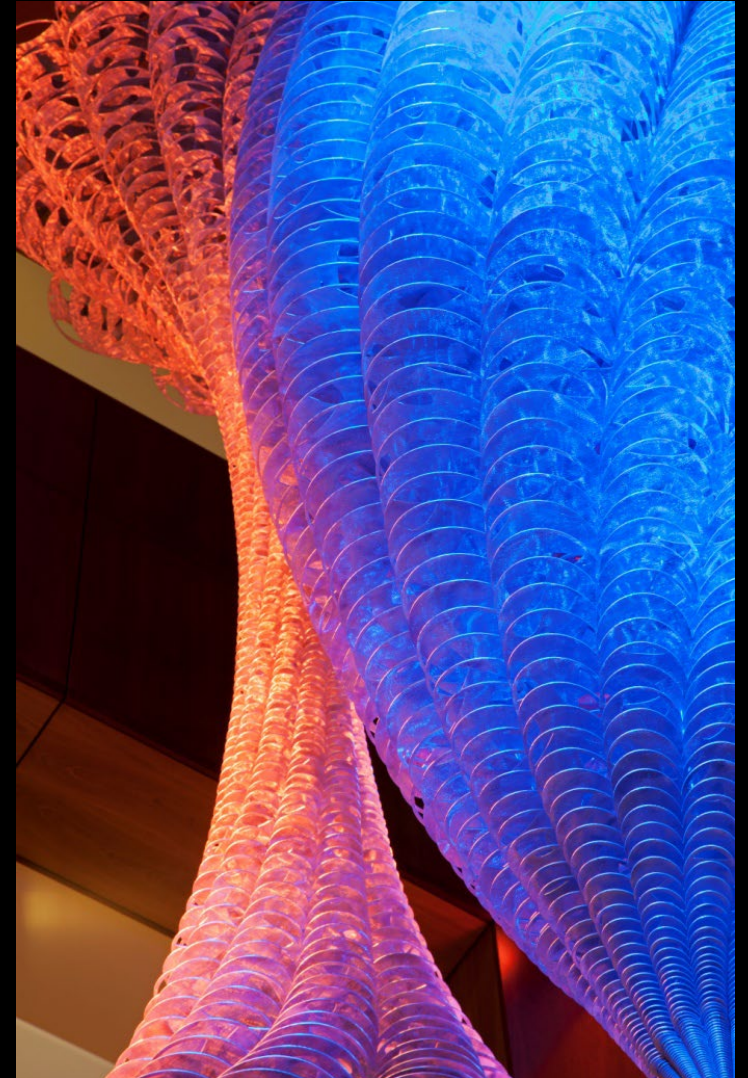

One representative from the following categories

- Public Art Committee
- Denver Commission on Cultural Affairs
- City Councilperson
- Ad Hoc Advisors

Artist Selection Process

4 – 6 months

1. Create Selection Panel
2. Site visit & Orientation
3. Request for Qualifications
4. Finalist selection
5. Finalist presentations
6. Finalist recommended & approved

Approval Stages

- Selection Panel
 - Approved by DCCA prior to starting project
 - Identify priorities for project
 - Selects artist or artist team
- Public Art Committee
 - Technical advisory experts to assess feasibility, troubleshoot potential issues
 - Provides feedback to selected artist and recommendation to DCCA
- Denver Commission on Cultural Affairs (DCCA)
 - Appointed by the Mayor
 - Approves a fair and transparent process
 - Makes recommendation to Mayor
- Mayor of Denver
 - Makes final determination on contracting with the artist or artist team
 - For contracts equal or more than $500k, Denver City Council also approves

Program Goals

- Every project is site-specific and unique
- Open, transparent process invites involvement, critique and advice from expert panelists
- Participation gives residents an opportunity to have impact on their community and the built environment

