Through an interactive case management system, Denver D.A. Diversion addresses the barriers which prevent clients from building and maintaining positive, pro-social attitudes and behaviors through a multi-faceted, informational, counseling and skill development approach. The balance of holding the offender accountable for their actions while developing personal and social competencies is critical to the overall success of the intervention. DDAO Diversion received referrals from the Juvenile Unit in office, where they are screened and accepted into the Juvenile Diversion Program or denied – three assessments are used during this process. Diversion programming can be broken down into cognitive behavioral classes, therapeutic treatment services, and restorative justice programs.
