BIO

Lindsey Myers, MPH, is a visionary public health leader with over two decades of experience driving transformative change across local, state, and national public health systems. She currently serves as Vice President of Public Health Workforce and Infrastructure at the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials (ASTHO), a national nonpartisan nonprofit dedicated to supporting and advancing the work of state and territorial health agencies. In this role, Lindsey leads strategic initiatives to strengthen public health infrastructure, modernize data systems, and improve workforce recruitment and retention.

Previously, Lindsey served as ASTHO's Vice President of Social and Behavioral Health, where she championed upstream, equity-focused approaches to prevent overdose, suicide, and adverse childhood experiences. Her earlier career includes 13 years at the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, where she led statewide efforts in injury, suicide, overdose, and violence prevention, and four years managing non-communicable disease programs at El Paso County Public Health.

Lindsey is deeply committed to health equity, systems transformation, and collaborative leadership. She holds a Master of Public Health in Chronic Disease Epidemiology from Yale University and a Bachelor of Arts in Biochemistry and English from the University of Colorado Boulder.
