Dear Denver Women's Commission,

I am reaching out as an applicant for the position of Commissioner for the Denver Women's Commission. My interest in this position comes from my passions of gender equity, female empowerment, and healthy masculinity.

My background consists mainly of the third listed passion – healthy masculinity. While working towards my bachelor's degree, I joined a group called Men's Project. This group of young men, including myself, met weekly to talk about the social construction of masculinity and its effects on men, women, and all people. We shared ideas to reconstruct masculinity in a healthier way to create a better community for everyone. Throughout my journey with Men's Project, I developed strong passions to continue advocating for the redefinition of masculinity and promoting gender equity.

In my current job, I train large groups of new college hires to sell software. Over anything, I focus on the atmosphere that I create for these young professionals. I have been commended for my ability to create a positive and energetic environment, and I have been commended for my approachability. I always strive to create an atmosphere that people of any background feel comfortable in.

I understand that the above experiences do not allude to any policy-creating experience. While I can't bring along any work with me creating or reviewing policy, I will bring along a thirst to understand this world. I am confident that I can learn what is needed to be an efficient and effective member of the organization while providing value to the Women's Commission immediately by sharing my own experiences as an identified male passionate about gender equity.

I thank you for taking the time to read and review my application. I am humbled to be in consideration and thank the Denver Women's Commission for the work you do. If given the opportunity, I look forward to sharing my passions for making this community more welcoming and better for women and all those underserved.

Sincerely,

Adam Piasecki
