

Jonathan McMillan brings over 30 years of expertise in gang intervention, policy, community violence intervention, and youth violence prevention to the forefront of his mission to cultivate safe and vibrant communities. Through implementing evidence-based strategies and addressing the root social and economic causes of violence, Jonathan has significantly contributed to reducing youth and gun violence. His expertise extends to developing community-led violence intervention programs that have garnered recognition for their impact and his leadership. Passionate about advocating for a violence-free world, Jonathan's work engages policymakers, community members, and youth alike, driving a collective effort towards a safer future for all. Jonathan is a fan of hip-hop, comics, and movies. He also hosts a podcast focused on firearm-related harm and violence prevention called "The InCredible Messenger".
