- The Public Art Program was established in 1988 by Mayor Federico Peña through an executive order and in 1991 Denver City Council enacted the 1% for Art Ordinance
- Any capital improvement project (CIP) with a budget equal or more than $1 million, 1% of the total construction budget is set aside for the inclusion of new public artworks
- Concourse Expansion Program generated $17M in 1% Public Art dollars. Four project sites identified for new public art per DEN's Public Art and Exhibits Master Plan
 - Concourse A-West, B-West, B-East and C-East
- Artwork is selected through a fair and transparent public process

For each project, a unique selection panel is assembled with community members, artists, arts professionals and members from Denver City Council, The Public Art Committee and Denver Commission on Cultural Affairs.

APPROVAL PROCESS:

1. Selection Panel
2. Public Art Committee (PAC)
3. Denver Commission on Cultural Affairs (DCCA)
4. Mayor of Denver
5. City Council

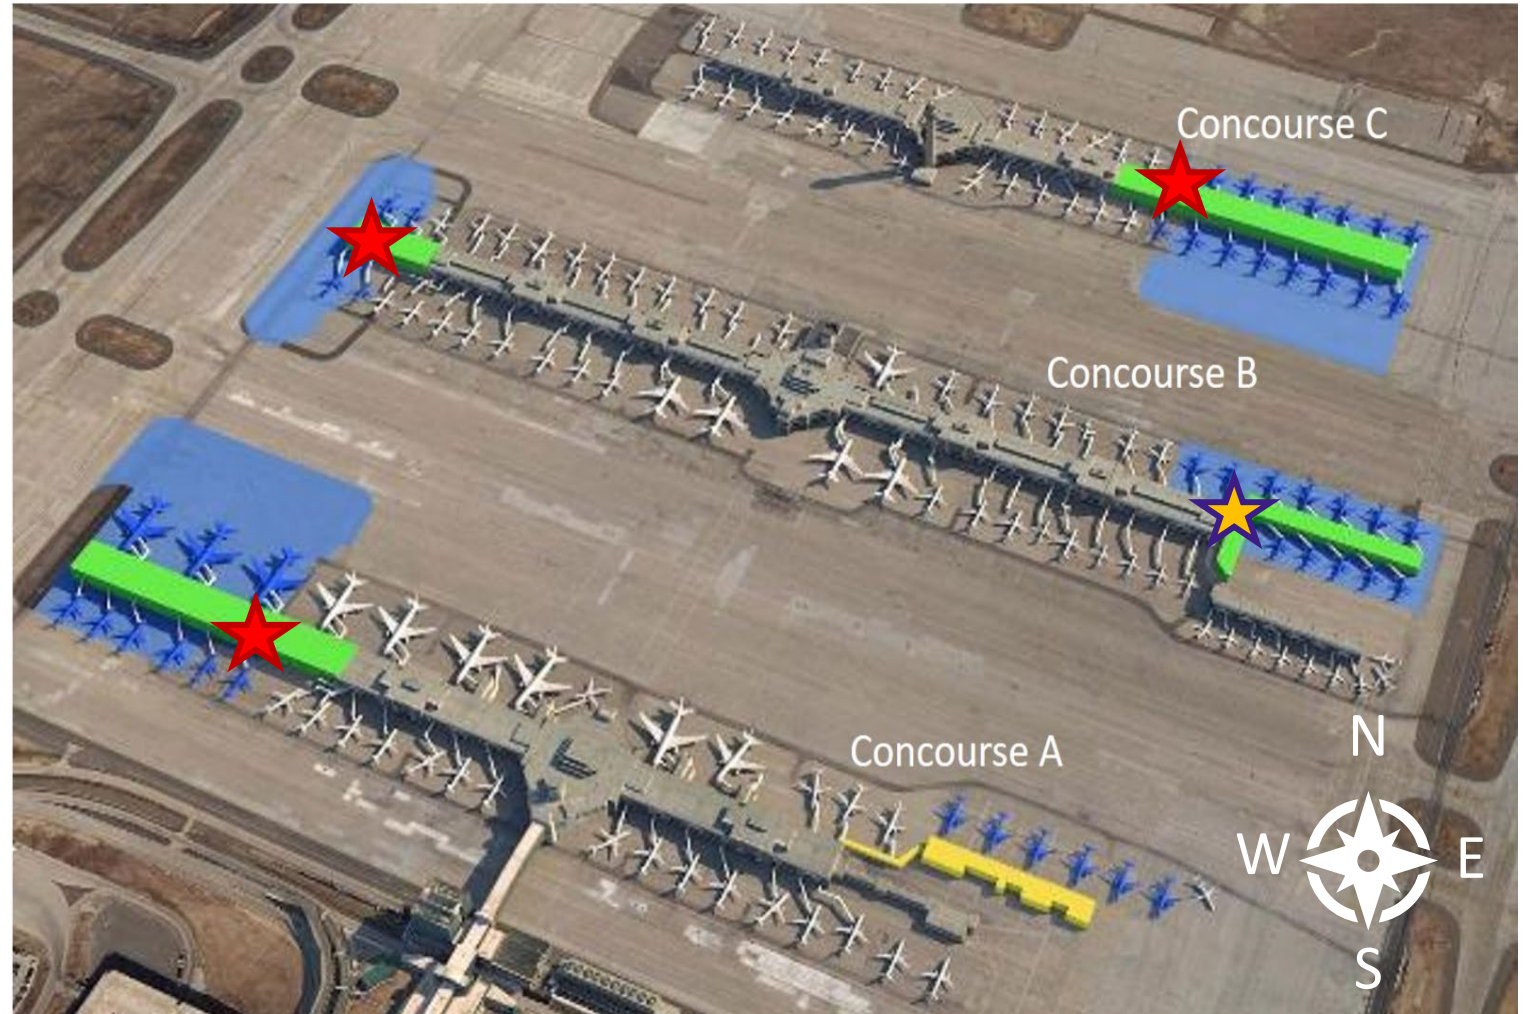

The Public Art Program is committed to ensuring an equitable and inclusive public art selection process with the community. As part of the Mayor's EDI Platform, all selection panels consist of a 51%+ majority of individuals from the Black, Indigenous and People of Color (BIPOC) and other historically marginalized communities, including people with disabilities and LGBTQ+. Ensuring meaningful representation from historically untapped and under-resourced communities is essential to these practices.

72% of DEN's selection panel for the Concourse Expansion Program is comprised of individuals who identify as members from the BIPOC, LGBTQ+ and disability community.
