Reprecincting

"It shall be the duty of the Clerk and Recorder to divide the City and County into election precincts." (8.2.12)

By charter, the Office of the Clerk and Recorder is responsible for setting the City and County of Denver's precinct boundaries.

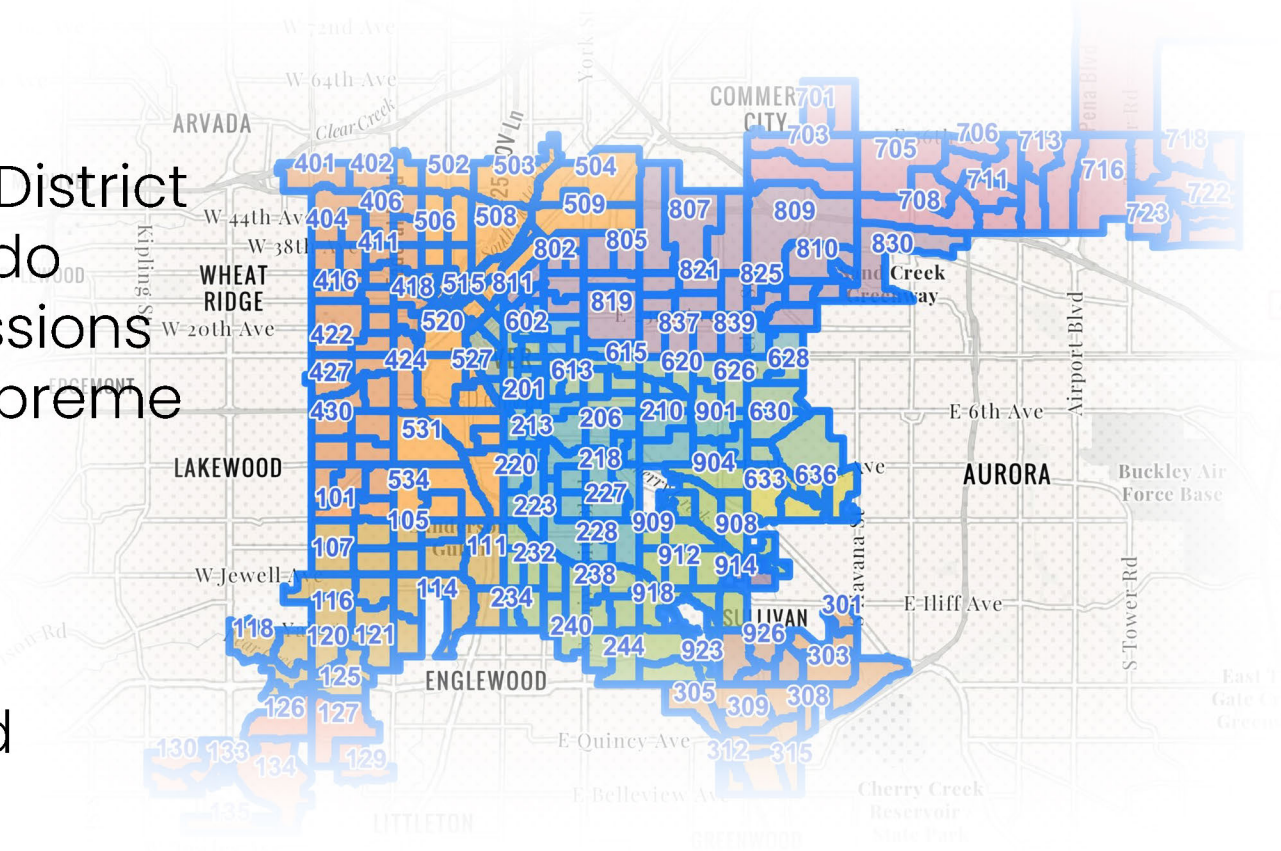

Reprecincting

- Precincts are set for the purpose of administering elections.
- Reprecincting is a nonpartisan process.
- Precincts allow the Denver Elections Division to ensure each voter receives a ballot that correctly reflects the offices and questions for which they can vote.
- Election results are aggregated at the precinct level to obtain valuable information while preserving voter anonymity.

Goals

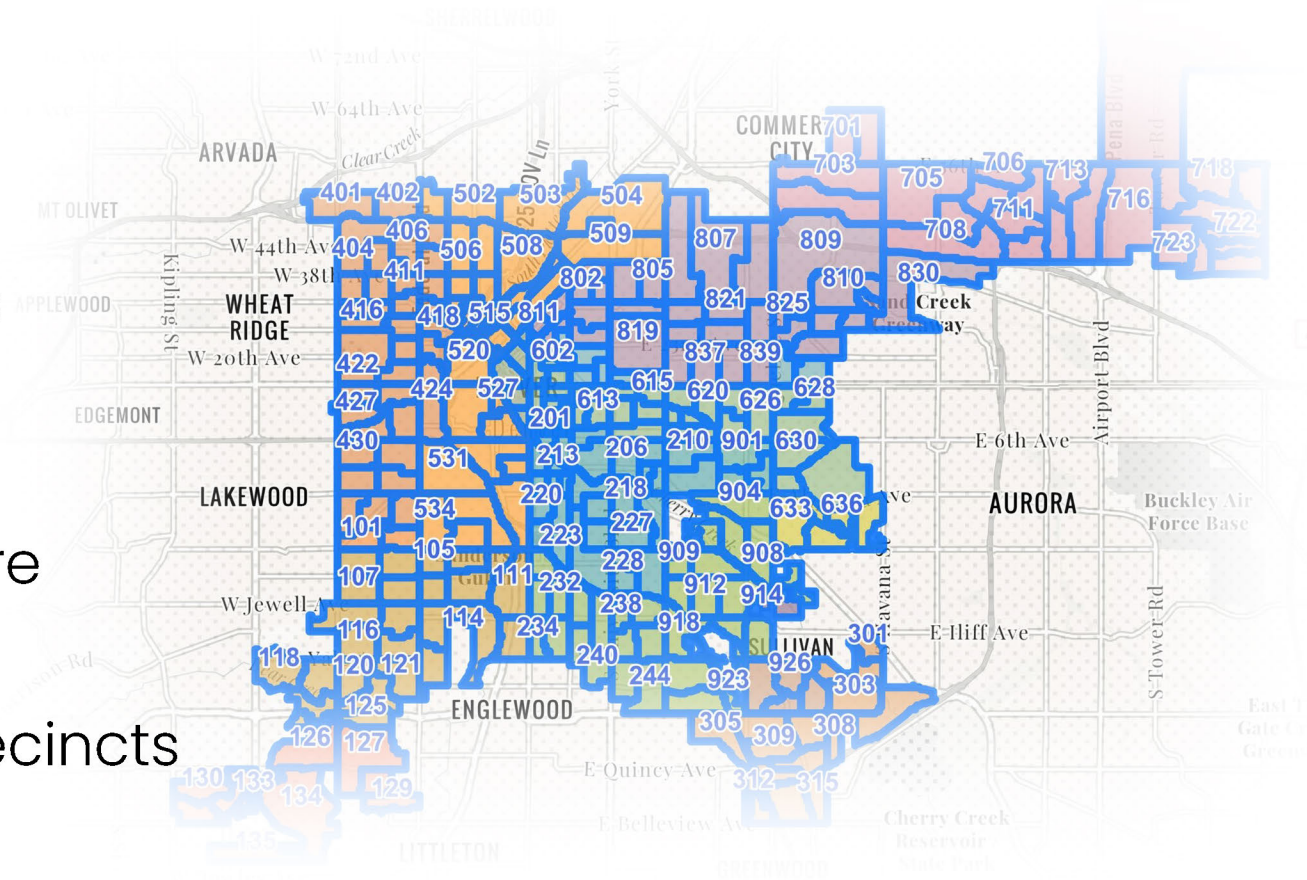

- Precinct boundaries will not cross Congressional, House and Senate District boundaries created by the Colorado Independent Redistricting Commissions and approved by the Colorado Supreme Court.
- Accommodate Denver's statistical neighborhoods.
- Consider natural communities and communities of interest.

Goals

- Reduce the overall number of precincts. The proposal includes 301 precincts, down from Denver's current number of 356.
- Maintain active registered voter populations of ~1,500 (and no more than 2,000) per precinct.
- Avoid split precincts and keep precincts contiguous wherever possible.

Reprecincting: Our Role and Timeline

November 2018:
Amendments Y and Z establish the independent redistricting commissions to draw Colorado's congressional and state legislative districts in 2021.

April 2020:
The Decennial US Census is completed on a delayed schedule due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

September 2021:
The Office of the Clerk and Recorder receives the final, official data from the 2020 Census.

December, 2021:
The Independent Commission's redistricting maps are approved by the Supreme Court.

January, 2022:
The Office of the Clerk and Recorder's Elections Division uses the Commission's redistricting maps, and active voter count, to create new precincts. The last day for the Elections Division to change or add new precincts is January 31, 2022. (CRS 1-5-103(1)) A map of the new precincts is also provided to City Council to begin their redistricting process.

Denver City Council is responsible for the REDISTRICTING process.
