(who, what, why)

Denver International Airport (DEN) was accepted into the Colorado Department of Public Health & Environment (CDPHE) Voluntary Cleanup and Redevelopment Program (VCUP) in October 2023 and is currently finalizing contracts for Program Management, Site Characterization, and Site Remediation work. Once contracts are in place, DEN will continue site investigation work including sitewide groundwater and surface water characterization, and soil sampling at the 66 identified Recognized Environmental Conditions (RECs) related to AFFF use and release. DEN's objective is to use CDPHE PFAS Grant Program funds to sample and characterize PFAS on its property to evaluate potential sources of PFAS to the environment. Sampling results will be used to assess the risks associated with the RECs, and to inform remediation approaches if necessary.

This project supports DEN's Vision 100 Sustainability guiding principle. PFAS is one of the most significant environmental risks facing airports, both because of the unique usage patterns and the extraordinary public pressure associated with reducing PFAS contamination. Participation in CDPHE's PFAS Grant Program will further DEN's efforts to address PFAS contamination and strengthen ties between DEN and CDPHE.

The CDPHE grant is for $500,000 and through 12/31/2026. The agreement can be extended for a maximum term of five years.
