Emily Yamazawa Mowrer is a bilingual program manager with over a decade of experience in education, community outreach, and human services. Passionate about advancing equitable access to services and education, she currently works Rocky Mountain Human Services, where she oversees contract compliance and ensures quality service delivery for Medicaid waiver and Mill Levy funds.

Emily has a strong background in language education, having worked as an ESL instructor and curriculum developer for more than ten years. Her work has focused on supporting diverse communities, including refugees and English language learners, through culturally responsive programming and workforce-focused education.

Proficient in Spanish and proficient in Japanese, Emily brings a global perspective to her work and excels in building connections across communities. She is also an active volunteer with the Aurora Asian Pacific Community Partnership, contributing to the steering committee to advance AAPI initiatives across the metro.
