1967 Landmark Preservation Ordinance

- Purpose:
 - Designate, preserve, and protect
 - Foster civic pride
 - Stabilize and improve aesthetic and economic vitality
 - Promote good urban design

“It is the sense of the council that the economic, cultural and aesthetic standing of this city cannot be maintained or enhanced by disregarding the historical, architectural and geographic heritage of the city and ignoring the destruction or defacement of such cultural assets.”

Mixed Reactions Greet Plan to Drop Gove

By MARY SCOPEL
Denver Post Special
The biggest surprise handed the Park Hill area of East Denver in recent weeks has been the proposed elimination by the Denver Board of Education of Gove Junior High School 1325 Colorado Blvd. in favor of a new junior high school at E. 32nd and Colorado Blvd.

questions from another and approval from still another. The Gove P.T.A. called a special meeting with less than one week's notice and had a turnout of about 200 parents and residents who quickly agreed on two resolutions and fired them off to the school board. They asked that the new optional area B, which is now optional to both Gove and Morey Junior High Schools remain so. Under the new proposal about 25 students in the area would all go to Morey.

The second proposal cited population figures which the P.T.A. said indicated the need for keeping a junior high school on the present Gove site. At another meeting, a group of about 75 parents from Barrett Elementary School, 2900 Jackson St., whose children also would be affected by the proposed new school, listened to Dr. Charles E. Armstrong, executive director of the office of business services, present the board's case for re-districting but had nothing good to say for the proposal.

"You already have the Gove site," Andrews said, "and it has been a school property for many years. Use it for another more adequate school and draw the lines to include us. The boundary lines wouldn't be any weirder than they are now."

EDGAR BENTON
Dispersion is the answer. school follow those of District 9. Johnson replied that neither council districts nor the presence of minority groups was considered in delineating the boundaries. Boundary lines, he stressed, were the result of compromise, and an attempt was made to prevent more optional areas. He said the ultimate aim of the board of education was to do away with optional school areas altogether.
