Biography:

Mary Beth Susman was the founding president of three statewide online colleges in Colorado, Kentucky, and Louisiana. She is a Smithsonian Laureate for her pioneering work in online learning, and her work is archived in the Smithsonian's Museum of American History. She retired as the Vice-President of the Colorado Community College System in 2004, and then started her own business helping state college systems create online colleges. She chaired the Lowry planning committee and served on the Denver Planning Board before running for council in 2011. Mary Beth Susman served as President of the Denver City Council from July 2012-July 2014, elected in her first year on council.
