Denver Revised Municipal Ordinance 38-158(6) that makes it unlawful by word, gesture or action, to endeavor to further the practice of prostitution in any place has been found unconstitutional by Denver County Court because it did not make clear what conduct is proscribed. The Denver Police Department has used that particular provision of the Prostitution ordinance to capture behaviors which seek to uncover whether a person is a police officer in the context of engaging in acts that further the practice of prostitution. The proposed ordinance seeks to make clear acts that are criminal in the context of engaging in behaviors that seek to uncover whether a person is a police officer for the purpose of engaging in prostitution.
