Executive Summary

This project marks the first phase of the Clara Brown Commons redevelopment, which spans a full city block bordered by 37th Ave., 38th Ave., York St. and Gaylord St. in the Cole neighborhood. Developed by Mile High Ministries, the project features this 61-unit family LIHTC development. Future phases will include 17 Habit for Humanity homes and a non-profit business center. A Tiny Home Village for persons experiencing homelessness is currently operating on the site, as a temporary offering prior to the redevelopment.

The proposed HOST performance loan of $1,825,000 would support hard and soft costs associated with construction. The financing would not require repayment, so long as affordability is maintained over the course of a 60-year covenant to be placed on the property.

Mile High Ministries is leveraging other funds at a ratio of nearly 1:14 for the $26.6 million rental project. Other public funding sources include Low Income Housing Tax Credits (4%), State housing tax credits and private activity bond funds from the Colorado Housing and Finance Authority.

Nearly one third of the units are deeply affordable, serving households earning up to 30 percent of the area median income (AMI). The project includes an emphasis on larger, family-sized units as detailed in the unit mix as follows:

On-site resident services will be provided, including adult education and jobs services. These resident services will be different from qualified supportive housing services intended for individuals exiting chronic homelessness, and more appropriate for low-income families.
