The Waterway Resiliency (WATR) Program (Program) is embarking on an unprecedented opportunity to reshape the City and County of Denver's (City) waterways by enhancing natural ecosystems, reducing flood risk, and creating places where people and nature can thrive in harmony. This Program will deliver Denver's One Water Vision for substantial portions of the South Platte River, Weir Gulch, and Harvard Gulch by restoring and reconnecting habitats, providing flood protection, and creating more inviting spaces along Denver's waterways. The Program will directly benefit some of the City's most underrepresented, historically under-resourced neighborhoods and advance Denver's goals for enhanced mobility, resiliency, and equity. The WATR Program is a long-term partnership effort with the US Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) and a USACE Civil Works alternative delivery pilot program.

Current funding for this contract will be provided by Denver's Wastewater CIP funds, the majority of which has already been identified in the current Wastewater 6 year CIP plan and has been appropriated. While this work will be locally funded, Denver has taken steps to preserve its ability to seek reimbursement from the USACE who administers the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law funds once these efforts are considered a complete discrete segment or component of work by USACE. Given the potential reimbursement of Federal funds for this work, Federal requirements shall apply to all work performed as part of the Project, including flow down of those requirements and obligations to Project contractors and subcontractors. DBE goals, rather than City-level MWBE goals, will be determined on a Task Order by Task Order basis.
