3-Year Residency Data on Cadet Program Applicants

Annual Program Cost

Total budget: $1,709,601

Personnel Services: $1,137,651
Services/Supplies: $571,950

Cost Savings to DOS:

In 2019, Cadets contributed 66,000 operational hours to the Department of Public Safety.

Though cadets primarily receive hands-on, job-related training in their assignments in the DOS, they also perform many routine functions that would otherwise require higher paid civilian positions or sworn personnel to complete. If compared to a civilian job description of Administrative Support Assistant IV (4 out of 7 in series, performs office support work under general supervision), cadets are 43% less costly than hiring equivalent civilian positions to perform similar work. Examples of this type of work include vehicle servicing, mail delivery, and event support.

Placement into Denver Safety Academies

During the 2000's, an average of 15 cadets entered Denver safety academies per year.

DSD: 6
DPD: 33
DFD: 59
D911: 1

Expected 2020: 8 cadets

DPD: 2
DFD: 6

The average departure is 14 cadets per year including the 11 that graduate into Denver safety academies. Cadets who have not joined Denver safety academies have pursued public service careers in other law enforcement agencies including the Denver DA's Office, F.B.I., Lakewood and Commerce City PD; others have left for the military or law school; one former cadet is a paramedic with Denver Health and one currently works with NASA.

Cadets have risen through every rank in the safety departments and include Division Chief Ron Thomas (DPD), Division Chief Charles Drennan (DFD), and Assistant Chief Carly Helwick (DFD). Since its inception, it is estimated that over 400 cadets have been employed in the Denver safety departments through participation in the Denver Public Safety Cadet Program.

The value of the Cadet Program is not just in hard cost savings to the Department for the services cadets provide, or how many cadets enter a career in public safety; the true value cadets have provided to the Department of Safety, the City and County of Denver, and our local communities for over 50 years is immeasurable.

Cadets wearing their uniforms in public are advocates for the Department and City's values and are leaders in their communities and academic institutions. Many cadets are 1st generation college students who inspire other young adults in their home schools or communities to follow in their footsteps and pursue higher education.

We often receive feedback from professors and advisors that cadets set the example in their college classrooms with their professionalism and academic successes. In 2019, the Program achieved over 1,000 academic credit hours and a 3.51 average GPA.

Additionally, in 2019 four states reached out to find more information on how to replicate the Denver Cadet Program, demonstrating the Program's reputation and successes on a national scale.
